Christmas by the Sea

At our waterfront paradise, Christmas beats to a different rhythm. Surrounded by azure waters, swaying palm trees and stunning superyachts, the yuletide season at ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove exudes warm tropical charm.

This year, we invite you to start your festive celebrations a little earlier at the sixth edition of the ONE15 Christmas Boat Light Parade™ on 16 and 17 November. Our boaters will kick off celebrations on Saturday with a dockside light display while a breathtaking cruising parade will end the festivities on an equally high note on Sunday.

In conjunction, the Sentosa Cove Holiday Market returns for the third time, bigger and better than ever. Members and their families and friends will be able to savour festive delights, discover curated gift ideas, and enjoy game stalls, children's rides and various roving entertainers.

Christmas is a good time to focus on the people who truly matter—such as family and friends. So gather your loved ones at LATITUDE Bistro for a festive meal they will remember for a long time.

Our decadent Christmas buffet will indulge you and yours in tantalising classics and addictive flavours. Some of our signature Christmas offerings such as roast turkey, ham, beef and log cakes are also available for takeaway. Turn to page 28 for the full menu as well as trivia on popular holiday dishes.

At ONE°15, the little ones are never left out. Throughout the school holidays, our line-up of craft activities, balloon sculpting and exuberant pool parties will ignite their imagination. This issue's travel feature also puts the spotlight on family-friendly vacations (page 36), just in time for you to plan your holiday escapade.

As the year draws to a close, it is only apt that we take a look back. Some of our key highlights this year included hosting the action-packed Superleague Triathlon in February—which drew competitors and spectators from around the world—and winning the Best Asian Marina award for a remarkable eight time at the prestigious Asia Boating Awards in April. Looking forward, the 10th edition of the Singapore Yacht Show in March is poised to be a key highlight on our 2020 calendar, bringing a dazzling line-up of luxury vessels, superyachts and other nautical marvels as well as the international boating community back to our shores.

We are also in the midst of refreshing our marina—as part of the reconfiguration works, you will enjoy enhanced facilities such as more berths for superyachts, upgraded pedestals, enhanced Wi-Fi, as well as a Remote Meter Reading system to remotely monitor your utilities usage. The entire exercise is scheduled to be completed next year.

As a valued Member, we invite you to celebrate the end of a fulfilling year and embark on new adventures with the ONE°15 family in the year to come. Because something beautiful is on the horizon.

CRUISE CONTROL

Superyachts can now call ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove a home away from home, thanks to recent upgrades.

A well-situated marina, depths which are suitable for larger vessels, calm waters, and protection from tidal surges and strong winds within the berth—all ensure ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove is well on its way to becoming the number one superyacht pit stop in the region. But, there's always room for improvement—and the Club is proving that it's always on top of things with its ongoing reconfiguration.

The updates and its designation as the only prime marina here to operate an immigration facility make ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove the epicentre of all things yachting-related.

Upgrades In Store

The marina will be updated in two phases, with Phase 1 having begun in October and Phase 2 set to come into effect in the second quarter of 2020. Upon completion, Members can expect a modern marina with new state-of-the-art pedestals, with features including automated billing and brand-new pontoons. Additionally, boaters will appreciate the spacious berths and new layout expanding the overall linear footage by 18.6 per cent, which will increase our berthing flexibility within the region.

The Club will also be able to accommodate a greater number of superyachts upon completion of the upgrading exercise. Not only will there be added berths for superyachts, these will also be relocated to the front of the Clubhouse, adding yet another layer of convenience and accessibility besides offering unbeatable open-water views to Members.

Ease of port clearance is guaranteed at ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove's very own Customs, Immigration, Quarantine (CIQ) facility, which opened in June this year. Once in, yachters can refuel at the pumps within the marina, use its waste pump-out system and top up their water supply.

Superyacht owners can also enjoy peace of mind when they leave their vessels at ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove, as the Club provides round-the-clock security guards, CCTV surveillance, card-only access to the marina.

In addition to a 24-hour mooring service, Members can expect quality service and assistance from an experienced marina team on issues such as equipment competence.

An efficient buggy service to get you to and from the Clubhouse, which offers convenient shower and laundry facilities—if your stop is a short one—as well as high speed Wi-Fi connectivity that makes doing business a breeze, are other perks. Yachters can also avail a range of other facilities, from indulging in gourmet nibbles and choice tipples, to a spot of relaxation at the Club's lobby or at the many restaurants and bars scattered around ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove. 📍

YACHTING INSIDER

Having been a captain, competitive sailor, boat builder and sail-maker, multi-hyphenate marina director James Roy brings a new level of intuitive service to ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove.

Marina director James Roy strives to understand the needs of boat owners.

At ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove on a sunny Wednesday afternoon, tranquillity prevails. Glossy yachts are berthed in the calm waters and guests can be seen ambling unhurriedly around the club. Seated across from me is James Roy, the very man who ensures that the marina runs like clockwork. As marina director, he oversees a constant flow of services and support for yacht owners, from the application of cruising permits to berthing and refuelling assistance.

“I’ve seen the yachting industry evolve tremendously over the last two decades. When I was growing up, a marina was just a place to park your boat. You did everything yourself, from berthing to maintaining it. Now, we provide help and support. We don’t just fulfil specific requests; we offer value-added service. It’s much closer to being a hotel than just a marina,” he shared.

Born To Sail

James speaks from personal experience. Born in Lymington, a small town in England famous for yachting, the ocean is in his bloodline. His father was a naval architect, his mother worked for a ferry company and his grandfather was a shipwright. He started sailing as soon as he could walk, and learnt how to sail by himself at the age of five.

The 42-year-old once dabbled in competitive sailing himself, winning a few races, including the New York Yacht Trophy from the South Coast of England for laser sailing in the early 1990s. However, the marina director is not just a sailor; he is a true yachting insider. While his peers were collecting pocket money from their parents, he had started his own yacht services company at the age of 15.

After school each day, the enterprising teenager would go from marina to marina, maintaining, polishing, cleaning and moving 15 different boats. His business flourished to a point where he had no option but to employ local part-timers to help with the workload.

“We don't just fulfil specific requests; we offer value-added service. It's much closer to being a hotel than just a marina.”

After he sold his service contracts, he sailed around Europe and North America as a crew member. Over the next two decades, he worked as a commissioning engineer, sailmaker and charter captain until 2008. He then relocated to the Middle East to work as a marina manager in Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, and the United Arab Emirates. The insights he gained from these diverse roles cannot simply be gleaned from the best marina management courses in the world.

“Boating is exciting because you never know what can happen,” he added. “You could encounter horrible weather or your engines could stop working. You can’t just say, ‘I give up. I’m going home for a cup of tea.’ There is no clocking off until you get to your marina destination. That is why a good marina triggers a ‘switch-off-mechanism’ in boaters. Once they park, they should have peace of mind. Our goal is to provide good service so that they can actually ‘switch off’.”

Another reason his current role is particularly fulfilling for James is his deep love for the ocean. “One of my most beautiful memories is seeing the northern lights from my boat in the Arctic Circle, reflected off water and ice. Because there is zero light pollution there, I could see all the stars and the Milky Way. You don’t realise how much light pollution comes from buildings until you actually get away from them,” he added.

He also loves meeting like-minded people at the club. “I like that boaters here are very passionate about their vessels. That is something I missed when I was in the Middle East—you don’t get people with that sort of attachment to their boats. It was more of a status symbol; a necessary luxury item. Here, boaters are doing it because they want to do it, not because they feel the need to do it,” he observed. 🌊

MUSTANG TEST DRIVE

Members got the chance to take Ford's classic muscle car for a spin

Few vehicles are as iconic and representative of Americana than the Ford Mustang, a car that has starred in numerous movies, television series and songs through the decades. On the evening of 20 August, Members and guests at the Ford showroom had the opportunity to not only revel in the Mustang's good looks, but also experience its power-packed performance. The venue was abuzz with excitement as everyone awaited their turn to hop into the driver's seat and experience the American legacy for themselves. A buffet with mini French pastries, popiah, shepherd's pie, meatballs and teriyaki chicken kept appetites satiated in the meantime. Each Member also received a golf bag after their test drive as a token of appreciation. 📍

The importance of a healthy spine cannot be overstated as it is central to our ability to function properly. Members and their guests received invaluable advice by chiropractic physician Dr David Leung at a session on how to care for the spine, held on the evening of 26 August at Constellation Ballroom. Attendees were given notes on how the way they sit affects the spine as well as other parts of the body, because of the pressure placed on the bones. Dr Leung also encouraged attendees to stretch and exercise on a regular basis to keep the bones and joints mobile. Members went away with a better understanding of spinal health and how vital it is to everyday life. 📍

ONE°15 MARINA CLEAN-UP

Battling the spectre of marine litter for trash-free seas

ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove organised its annual Marina Clean-up in conjunction with its Eco Day carnival on 8 September. The Club celebrated the aquatic ecosystem that is its lifeblood by attempting to remove trash before it reaches the ocean.

The ill-effects of marine trash are far-reaching and significant—ocean litter threatens maritime safety, degrades water quality, imperils ocean life and people’s health, and has adverse effects on local economies, tourism and fishing.

Over 100 land volunteers and divers joined in to help out at the event, which kicked off at 9.30am following a safety briefing. After arming themselves with nets and diving necessities, the volunteers dove into action to pick up as much trash as they could.

The two-hour clean-up snagged 60kg of metal rubbish and 8kg of plastic trash. Among the junk were glass bottles, traffic cones, a skateboard, bicycle and even a rusty shopping cart. The volunteers partook in lunch after the clean-up exercise to celebrate the success of the operation. 📌

ONE°15 ECO DAY AND PACT SPONSORSHIP

Club flies the flag for green causes

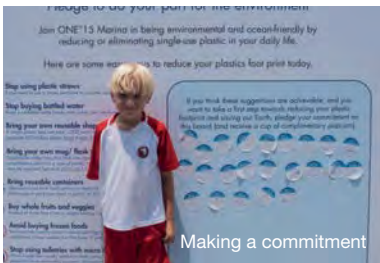

Starting them young

A whale of a time

In celebration of its 12th anniversary, ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove dedicated 8 September to doing its part for the environment. Members and business partners attended an eco-themed family carnival, where they learnt how to reduce, reuse and recycle courtesy of upcycling workshops and engaging activities.

Eco-related games taught visitors about the items that can be recycled, and those that cannot. Another educational booth centred on the emergence of plant-based meat dishes and introduced the Impossible menu, which features at LATITUDE Bistro. Impossible Meat smells, handles, cooks and tastes just like real meat, but is kinder on the environment as cultivating plants results in a lower carbon footprint compared to producing meat and dairy products from animals.

Making a commitment

Recycling 101

A number of eco-friendly vendors were also in attendance, offering various sustainable products ranging from daily necessities to apparel. Adding to the carnival feel were free popcorn, balloon-sculpting sessions and a 10m inflatable obstacle course in the pool for the little ones.

Upcycling to reduce waste

Organic cotton threads

To keep up its efforts in cultivating the ONE°15 Marina – Seakeepers Asia Coral Garden project, the Club also invited Members and partners to become sponsors in the Plant-A-Coral-Today (PACT) initiative. Marina Technology & Construction signed up to be a part of the project, which saw divers from NUS' Tropical Marine Science Institute also play their part by planting corals at the marina.

Backed by a team of coral researchers from NUS' Tropical Marine Science Institute, ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove has a long-term vision to build a thriving marine biosystem within its waters. The Club also hopes to eventually develop it as an educational site where students can learn about marine biodiversity. 🌱

NATIONAL DAY CARNIVAL

Marking the nation's birthday with fun and games

Members and their guests gathered to celebrate Singapore's 54th birthday at the Club on the evening of 9 August. About 40 people gathered outside LATITUDE Bistro and by the pool to participate in a number of fun games such as a Nerf shoot-out—which proved especially popular—as well as darts and can knockdown. Lending a local flavour, in keeping with the occasion, was kuti-kuti: A traditional children's game in which two opposing players take turns to flip colourful plastic tokens on top of those of their opponent. Kids also had fun in the pool as they made their way through the inflatable obstacle course. The National Anthem was played and the Pledge recited as everyone rose to their feet, remembering the significance of the day. 📌

LITTLE MAGICIAN WORKSHOP

Members' children had fun learning optical illusions

Captain's Table was transformed into an illusionist's paradise on the afternoon of 17 August as budding young conjurers gathered to pick up tricks at the Little Magician workshop. The Members' kids imbued the venue with squeals of laughter as they observed and also tried their hand at seemingly impossible feats under the guidance of a magician, such as turning pieces of paper into money and card-guessing tricks. The event proved a hit, with the children and their parents asking when the next workshop would be held. 📌

MID-AUTUMN FESTIVAL

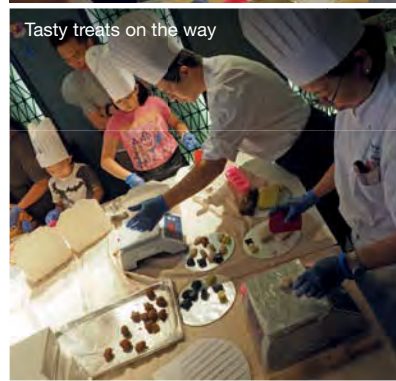

Little hands were kept busy crafting lanterns and mooncakes for the Zhong Qiu Jie celebration

Members' kids enjoyed two fun and educational workshops on 14 September to mark the Mid-Autumn Festival. The afternoon kicked off with a snow skin mini mooncake-making class at Captain's Table, with children learning how to make the mooncake skin and fillings, and combine both into delicious confections. The kids proved to be quick learners, and some had even made up to 18 mini mooncakes at the end of the session. It was a lively session full of chatter and laughter.

The evening workshop involved a lantern-making class and walk. Young ones gathered in the Kids' Playroom for a fun-filled session that required them to exercise their creativity as they followed the instruction sheet and attempted to bring the products of their imagination to life. After they had come up with their own colourful creations, the kids and their parents took a walk with the fruits of their labour from the Club to Sentosa Cove Village and back again, making new friends along the way. 📍

LUCKY CHARM

The first Alhambra long necklace, a yellow gold version inspired by the four-leaf clover, was created in 1968. This lucky-charm motif has since become an emblem for French luxury jeweller Van Cleef & Arpels—with many limited editions being launched in recent years. For 2019, it has created a yellow gold pendant that features Celestial Blue porcelain set with a sparkling round diamond at the centre. Make this limited edition design even more exclusive with a personalised engraving. Inscribed with a name, date or message, it makes for a perfect gift to that special person in your life—well-loved and unique for all eternity. The Alhambra necklace is available at all Van Cleef & Arpels boutiques.

SCENTS WITH SENSE

Diptyque has launched a new line of wearable perfumes—Prêts-à-Parfumer—so you don't have to worry about spilling precious liquids when you travel. In the form of a mat satin sticker tattoo, braided thread and a brooch with a pre-perfumed ceramic disk, these fun and unique olfactory pieces discreetly diffuse fragrance all day long. Choose from one of the French luxury perfumer's iconic scents such as Do Son, Eau Rose and Tam Dao, depending on what suits your mood. The Prêts-à-Parfumer collection is available at all Diptyque boutiques.

TAKE FLIGHT

Got a sporty challenge? Chopard's latest Alpine Eagle—a reinterpretation of its St. Moritz timepiece—may be the answer. Crafted from an exclusive, ultra-resistant and light-reflecting metal Lucent Steel A223, this unisex timepiece comes in 36mm and 41mm with a Chopard chronometer-certified movement and 42-hour and 60-hour power reserve respectively. Its rock-like textured dial evoke the Alpine eagle's iris, its hands, the raptor's beautiful feathers, and the glinting dermo-compatible steel is reminiscent of glaciers. The Alpine Eagle is available at all Chopard boutiques.

CONTEMPORARY CHIC

For the modern woman who is always one step ahead of fashion trends, getting an accessory from New York brand Khaite will be pure delight. The buzz-worthy womenswear label that's a hit with celebrities just debuted a range of boots and bags for fall/winter 2019. The perfect finishing touch to any everyday look, the modern yet timeless designs are made by artisans in Tuscany. THE ART OF TRAVEL

Pauline Moynat, the only woman trunk-maker during the 19th century, broke boundaries with her innovative designs. The most iconic among them is the Limousine trunk that espouses the contours of an automobile, which is, even today, handmade by master artisans—the leather-covered edges are studded with no less than a 1,000 individual nails to form the distinctive signature of Moynat. The French maison created the stylish trunk to accompany travellers on their trips everywhere, and there can be no better gift for the discerning road warrior. The Limousine trunk is available at all Moynat boutiques.

YULETIDE DELIGHTS

Make this Christmas memorable with a holiday spread that draws from culinary traditions from around the world.

While Christmas is often considered a time to indulge and unwind before the start of a new year, it's also the season when family traditions are dusted off and enjoyed together. And contrary to popular belief, turkey isn't the only go-to when it comes to preparing a festive meal. Want a little inspiration? Get to know signature Christmas dishes from Germany, Italy and France with Executive Chef William Soh of LATITUDE Bistro at ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove and prepare to serve up a truly international Yuletide feast.

ITALY

Beef in Red Wine

Holiday feasting in Italy spans the course of three days: Christmas Eve, Christmas Day and Boxing Day. Each region here has its own speciality cuisine, and one popular dish, originating from Piedmont in northwest Italy, is beef braised in red wine. Strips of beef are marinated in red wine and herbs before being sautéed with cured pork fat.

While the dish uses a specific red wine known as Barolo, you can substitute it with similar red wines such as Chianti or Montepulciano d'Abruzzo. The secret to making tender beef strips, says Chef Soh, is to first cook the beef sous vide before slow-braising it in the oven. "Consider using Singaporean beers or spices to the dish to help tenderise the meat, too," he adds. "Serve it with pickled gherkins, roasted potatoes or root vegetables of your choice." But if all that is too much work in too little time, serve LATITUDE Bistro's Roasted Beef Sirloin at your Christmas get-together instead.

ITALY

Prosecco

Christmas in Italy means it's time for bollicine or bubbly. There's only one kind of bubbly that's a must at Christmas, and that is Prosecco. While most drink it unmixed, it's also a great option for those who want an elegant aperitif. "It's one of my favourites because it has great body, carbonation, and is easy to drink if you're new to wines," says Chef Soh, who uses Prosecco and raspberry liqueur to make a delicious cocktail. "It also goes well with yuzu and honey," he adds. You don't have to go far to find a good bottle either, as LATITUDE Bistro is stocking up on bottles of Accademia Prosecco just for the holidays.

GERMANY

Roasted Goose

Germany's bird of choice for the Christmas meal is goose—it's a staple at every festive occasion. This fowl choice results from a Catholic tradition of commemorating St. Martin's Day early in November by consuming goose. Typically held on 11 November, it marks the start of Advent, a time of fasting which ends on Christmas Eve, where goose is again eaten as part of the celebrations.

Goose meat has a sweet, distinct flavour and is typically seasoned with salt, pepper, mugwort or marjoram. However, Chef Soh prefers to use local Singaporean spices, kaffir lime leaves or even pineapple juice to "remove the meat's gamey smell" before stuffing the goose with forcemeat, foie gras, lemon and garlic couscous. "It's important to baste the goose regularly during the slow roasting process to keep the meat from drying out," he advises. But if you're not a fan of goose's strong aroma, take a cue from the US and Britain and go for turkey instead. Better yet, opt for LATITUDE Bistro's traditional roast turkey.

FRANCE

Bûche de Noël

The term originally referred to an actual Yule log, which was burnt on the hearth during Christmas. This practice fell out of favour sometime in the first half of the 20th century, and the term was then transferred to the dessert. Traditionally made from a yellow genoise that's baked in a large, shallow Swiss-roll pan and then iced with chocolate buttercream, the dessert has now grown to include a variety of flavours and even liqueur icing.

It is typically served with one end sliced off and placed atop the cake or on the side to resemble a chopped branch. The secret to making a good log cake, says Chef Soh, is to build a light sponge base with good texture. "You can also infuse the sponge cake with a dash of alcohol-imbued syrup such as rum, Kirsch, Grand Marnier or Cointreau, while fillings such as mango, durian and jackfruit add a beautiful local flavour," he explains. This Christmas, LATITUDE Bistro has three log cakes to choose from: Vanilla, durian, and chocolate.

FRANCE

Roasted Capon

A rooster that has been castrated before reaching sexual maturity, the capon has occupied a place on the tables of European clergymen and royalty since the Middle Ages. It was often baked into pies, stewed or roasted, and was considered the poultry of choice for Christmas feasts in the homes of the wealthy. In modern-day France, capon is a significant part of the Christmas Réveillon, a long dinner that takes place on Christmas Eve and goes on past midnight.

The lack of testosterone makes capon meat more tender and flavourful than regular chicken. It is also fatty with a higher proportion of white meat. While the French stuff their capon with chestnuts, Chef Soh recommends pairing it with spicy coconut or peanut sauces to give it a Singaporean flavour. He also recommends serving capon with roasted capsicums or parsnips. However, capons are a rare find in Singapore, so if you're unable to locate any at supermarkets or butchers around the island, consider LATITUDE Bistro's Honey Roasted Ham for your holiday repast.

GERMANY

Feuerzangenbowle

This classic German rum punch was made popular by a 1944 German film titled Die Feuerzangenbowle and is made from heated dry red wine that has been spiced with cinnamon sticks, cloves, star anise and orange peel. A small pair of tongs is then fitted with a 250g sugar cone that is soaked with rum and set alight to melt slowly into the wine. The ceremony of preparing the drink is itself considered to be important as it promotes Gemütlichkeit, a feeling of warmth and friendship.

Chef Soh considers punches such as Feuerzangenbowle to be versatile party drinks. “Whenever orange peel, nutmeg and cinnamon, or even fruits such as cranberries and cherries are added to any drink or meal, it gives our senses the idea that it is Christmas,” he says. What he loves most about Christmas punch is its fruity zest which is sparkling and simple—“the right amount for the start of Christmas spirits.” You can use gin, whisky, bourbon or Shiraz as the base for your punch bowl or pick up a bottle of Croix Du Marquis Sauvignon Blanc from LATITUDE Bistro.

EUROPEAN ESCAPADE

The Old Continent draws culture vultures with its stately architecture and fine-art pantheon, but its historic destinations also have playful sides that appeal to families.

Edinburgh, UK

Scotland's capital stokes the imagination, with its craggy hills and medieval castles straight out of a fairy tale. Clamber about the centuries-old Edinburgh Castle, where knights, kings and queens, including Mary, Queen of Scots, once roamed. Young travellers will be intrigued by its cannon-crowned tower and dungeons. Fans of Harry Potter should sign up for the free daily The Potter Trail, where you can discover the magical locations that inspired JK Rowling's hugely successful books. Even if you are not a die-hard Potterhead, the walking tours, peppered with nuggets of information about Edinburgh, are fascinating. Then, escape the chilly weather at The Salisbury Arms, a cosy, family-friendly pub that serves up respectably hearty Sunday roasts. It also offers a kid's menu plus colouring materials and storytelling sessions to keep them occupied.

Madrid, Spain

The carefully manicured gardens and colourful, multicultural markets of Spain's capital city are ripe for unhurried exploration. Foodie families may want to start their gastronomic tour at Mercado San Anton, a three-storey culinary hotspot where they can sample rustic regional specialities such as cocido madrileno, a rich chickpea stew with meat and vegetables. Alternatively, opt for molecular surprises at the two-Michelin-starred La Terazza de Casino at Casino de Madrid (www.iacworldwide.com/clubs/casino-de-madrid). For a multi-sensory experience, visit Real Jardin Botanico to marvel at carnivorous tropical plants thriving in a greenhouse that's open year-round. Teens—and their tech-obsessed parents alike—should not miss the Robot Museum, where they can imagine the future through the NAO humanoid robot and replicas of Star Wars androids.

Amsterdam, the Netherlands

Unapologetically hip and nocturnal, Amsterdam may not fit most people's notions of a family getaway, but underscoring the city is a cultural richness that's accessible to young and old. Learn about how people around the world live through interactive exhibits at the anthropological Tropenmuseum, then discover the Dutch people's connection to the sea at the National Maritime Museum – where you can explore a replica Dutch East India Company ship. Berlin, Germany

This teeming city is a wonderland of superlatives for nature aficionados, from its AquaDom & SEA LIFE Berlin—where you'll find the world's largest freestanding aquarium—to Zoo Berlin, said to be the world's most species-rich zoo. Here, challenge one another in spotting gorillas, giant pandas and the prehistoric-looking Abyssinian Ground Hornbill. Speaking of which, you can come face to face with a 13.27m-tall Brachiosaurus skeleton at the Natural History Museum. Its after-hours tours by torchlight are always a thrill. From natural curiosities, dive into a cornucopia of exotic eats at the trendy Markthalle Neun, a one-stop dining haven for everything from Jamaican-style jerk chicken to Tibetan momos on its fizzy Street Food Thursdays. Then unwind away from the city's crowds at the sylvan Berliner Golf & Country Club Motzener See (www.iacworldwide.com/clubs/berliner-golf-country-club-motzener-see), where you can luxuriate in a massage room or out on a lakeside terrace.

London, UK

With its sheer variety of attractions, there's nothing quite as all-inclusive as London. Kids and adults keen on rediscovering their childhood will love perusing the exhibits of beloved toys from the 20th century at the V&A Museum of Childhood. It is a trove of forgotten joys such as battery-powered robots and vintage board games. To view the best of London's most famous attractions, including the Tower of London and St Paul's Cathedral, at a leisurely pace, a cruise of the River Thames is in order. Tour operator Bateaux London's one-and-a-half-hour boat tour includes a quintessentially British afternoon tea complete with scones and finger sandwiches. Adventure-seekers in need of an adrenaline rush can whizz down a snaking, 178m-tall spiral slide at Olympic Park. It's wrapped around a massive sculpture called ArcelorMittal Orbit, which you can also abseil down. Then fuel up at Bistrottheque, a cheerful restaurant praised for its attentive service and comfort food. Try the cheeseburger with pancetta and caramelised onions, and treacle tart with clotted cream.

Indulge in bite-sized delicacies chock full of veggies, seafood and meat; or savour bowlfuls of fragrant hot soup in which all kinds of fresh vegetables and delicious meat have been simmering. These dishes will sate the appetite and satisfy the soul.

In December, LATITUDE Bistro prepares for the holidays with a number of special treats that are sure to get you into the Christmas mood. Gammon ham is glazed with luxe manuka honey—which comes from bees that feed on the manuka bush in New Zealand—for a juicy treat that is bursting with flavour. Or you could opt for the Black Angus ribeye steak served with goose liver truffle sauce: The rich, elegant sauce goes wonderfully with the well-marbled, tender meat, with the addition of melted Raclette cheese raising your enjoyment to another plane. Ring in the holidays with dishes boasting depth of flavour that will awaken the most tired palate.
