Another year will soon be coming to an end—time is indeed flying by. It has been an eventful year for us, as we have been able to tick many things off our to-do list and set many others in motion for the future.

We are especially pleased to announce the completion of the first phase of ONE°15 Marina Panwa Phuket—it is now ready for berthing, with facilities including a cafe, refuelling station, boaters’ lounge, showers, and laundry area. Aside from it marking a major milestone in the expansion of the ONE°15 Marina network, its strategic location positions it as a premium destination on the global yachting route. Read more about what you can expect from the new marina on page 22. We hope to welcome you all there soon.

LATITUDE Bistro is undergoing a major overhaul and slated to reopen by early next year. Expect a completely reimaged layout—well-appointed entrances for a better arrival experience, reconfigured indoor spaces with cosy booth seats, remote working counters, expanded alfresco dining spaces to soak in marina views, and more. The new look will further uphold our commitment to enhancing the Club experience for Members and guests. We are also pleased to announce the transformation of our Tennis Pavilion into a pickleball court—it is expected to open for reservations by early November this year.

Also, vessels berthed with us can now avail a burgee (flag) with our logo as a symbol of their affiliation with the Club. Available in three sizes to suit boats of different sizes, it is an expression of our deep appreciation for our patrons.

The Club is also very excited to announce that we will be hosting and organising the SB20 World Championship in January 2025—the first to be held in Southeast Asia. We expect to see 80 teams competing in this prestigious championship. RSVP (page 40 onwards) outlines how you can take part in some of the race segments, as well as other exciting events we have planned for the next two months.

November is also the month that we organise our annual marine conservation event, Blue Water EduFest. Held from 7 to 9 November, it includes the two-day Blue Eco Summit, Blue Water Heroes Awards and a beach cleanup. This is the third edition of this pioneering event, and it further strengthens our resolve to spread awareness about the urgent need for innovative action to protect and conserve our region’s waters. Making it extra special this year, eminent marine conservationist and oceanographer Dr Sylvia Earle will deliver the keynote speech at the conference. In an exclusive interview (page 17), she shares her varied experiences, aspirations and dreams for our planet’s future. The feature also spotlights the 10 passionate eco-champions, shortlisted as finalists for Blue Water Heroes Awards 2024.

We also recently had research ship Plastic Odyssey berthed at our marina, en route to other parts of Southeast Asia on its three-year world expedition. She is an embodiment of the co-founders’ tireless efforts to rid the world’s waters of plastic pollution and build a sustainable future. Read about their mission and unique experiences (page 20). It brings me great pleasure to be able to spotlight such inspiring people—and to have played a part in our own way.

Last but never the least, what’s the holiday season without LATITUDE Bistro’s Taste of Christmas take-home goodies? We have two specially curated bundles and new menu additions: The exquisite Herb-Crusted Lamb Rack and the indulgent Chestnut Yule Log Cake—a refreshing alternative to the classic Dark Chocolate Log Cake. The Club Perks section (page 34 onwards) has details about these and more.

This issue is an affirmation of our continuing quest for a cleaner, better world. It is also a celebration of the spirit of the season—the joy and happiness we derive from giving you the best you can have is unmeasurable. Happy Holidays to one and all!

COME SAIL AWAY

PRIME YOURSELF FOR THE NEW YEAR
BY TREATING YOURSELF TO SOME REST AND RELAXATION ABOARD SOME OF THE WORLD'S MOST REJUVENATING CRUISES.

BY BEATRICE BOWERS

EAST MEDITERRANEAN

Embrace slow living with Gulet Cruises' curated Eastern Mediterranean itineraries. All your trips occur aboard gulets, a type of traditional sailboat made out of wood, with a legacy tracing back to Southwestern Turkey. Gulet Cruises offers both private and cabin charters to various destinations including Turkey, Greece and Montenegro. While the gulets don't offer the same wellness amenities as larger mega cruises, its roster of remote destinations, removed from the bustle of nearby cities, will leave you entirely recharged. For example, their Greek Island itinerary starts in Bodrum, and docks at some of Turkey and Greece's oldest islands, transporting you back in time. On day four, you stop at the Unesco World Heritage Island of Rhodes, which has been home to numerous early civilisations since the fifth century. Today, it is home to stunning blue waters and white beaches, as well as architectural marvels, including a medieval city and the Acropolis of Lindos.

Clockwise, from far left: The Kalkara Marina in Malta; a bay in Bodrum, Turkey; the Acropolis of Lindos in the Island of Rhodes; views from atop Lindos.

PLAY

Start your trip a day earlier in Bodrum, and spend some time in the iconic Dalyan Mud Baths, as well as the beautiful Turtle Beach nearby.

CROATIA

If you've got a trip to Europe lined up for the end of the year, make a small detour to the Balkans, and book yourself a yoga cruise trip with Sail Croatia. The one-week luxury cruise keeps things small and intimate with a guest count of 38. You'll sail aboard a modern small ship cruise, Almissa, and stop at beautiful Croatian islands and cities such as Dubrovnik, Mljet and Split. Each day starts with a revitalising yoga session on the deck, led by experienced instructors, followed by a healthy breakfast. The cruise also includes guided meditation, hiking sessions, on-land excursions, and ample opportunities to connect with like-minded travellers, making it a perfect blend of adventure, relaxation, and wellness. You will have plenty of free time to explore the stunning land destinations with itineraries planned by the onboard tour manager, or choose to immerse yourself in the natural beauty around you. Swim in the crystal-clear waters of the Adriatic, then practise your sun salutations on the sun deck. After a few days of mindful living at sea, the cruise docks in Hvar, where guests can enjoy a yoga session in a historic vineyard, before wrapping up the day with a traditional dinner and wine tasting.

PLAY

After exploring Croatia, pay a visit to Montenegro to make the most of your time in the Balkans. Make sure to spend a day at Porto Montenegro Yacht Club (pmyc.portomontenegro.com).

AFRICA

For travellers committed to the idea of a year of rest and relaxation, consider a World Cruise with Seabourn Cruise Line. The Grand Africa Voyage is one of its highlights with a 90-day itinerary that takes you from Barcelona through the entire African continent, visiting 42 destinations across 20 countries, including overnights in some historic countries. The mid-journey trip to Tanzania's national parks gets you up close and personal with Africa's wealth of wildlife. Voyagers get to spend two full days at Serengeti National Park on safaris by a dedicated guide. Views of spectacular open plains go hand-in-hand with wildlife-spotting opportunities, all in their natural habitat.

There's also a four-day tour of the Ngorongoro Highlands, where you'll experience Maasai cultural traditions and connect with local tribes. A full day trip to the Ngorongoro Conservation Area, home to 30,000 different animals, also awaits. Onboard the cruise, complimentary bubbly, caviar and gourmet meals pamper you throughout your journey. A mindful living experience, designed by integrative medicine expert Dr Andrew Weil, is another avenue for rejuvenation.

PLAY

Before stepping into your sea escapade, rest and relax and immerse yourself in the history and culture of Catalan society at Círculo del Liceo (circulodelliceo.es), the oldest clubs in Spain, at the heart of Barcelona.

GULF OF ALASKA

“For some of us, rejuvenation means getting in touch with the sublimity of nature”—if this quote by naturalist John Burroughs speaks to your soul, then you might want to consider Discovery Princess’ week-long cruise around the Gulf of Alaska. You start your journey from Vancouver and set a course for several beautiful islands and boroughs in Alaska, before heading to Glacier National Park. On-shore excursions let you get in touch with a quieter way of life, such as a day in Ketchikan, a city steeped in nature and Native American history, and home to the world’s largest collection of standing totem poles. A day in Glacier National Park is like stepping into a sanctuary of nature’s raw and pristine beauty, think the crystalline rushes of the Illecillewaet River and the forested flanks of Bear Creek Falls, and more. Recharged, head back on-board the Discovery Princess for more pampering. The variety of restaurants with Michelin-minted chefs keep your taste buds happy, while luxurious spa treatments at the Lotus Spa soothe both body and mind. Discovery Princess also sails to several other destinations, including Sydney, Los Angeles, and Seattle. 📍

Boarding the cruise to Vancouver? Then make Hollyburn Country Club (hollyburn.org) one of your pitstops. The mountainside club boasts excellent views of downtown Vancouver and is acclaimed for its sports facilities.

A DEEP DIVE

OCEAN EXPLORER AND CONSERVATIONIST EXTRAORDINAIRE DR SYLVIA EARLE ON THE BEAUTY OF OUR BLUE PLANET AND THE URGENT NEED TO PROTECT ITS FUTURE.

TEXT SANDHYA MAHADEVAN

Dr Sylvia Earle needs no introduction. Her tireless work in raising awareness on the urgent need to preserve our ocean's ecosystems have led to numerous deep-sea expeditions and pioneering work in submersible technology—and earned her the moniker of Her Deepness. I caught up with her over a video call in the midst of her very busy schedule, including NYC Climate Week 2024, a conference in Santa Barbara, and board meetings in the Bahamas and Barcelona. This is all before she arrives in Singapore in November for the Club's annual marine conservation event, Blue Water EduFest (7 to 9 November)—Dr Earle will be the keynote speaker at the Blue Eco Summit. Here, she shares the wonders of the ocean and explains why its conservation is top priority.

Where does your love for the ocean come from?

Everyone should have a passion for the ocean. Many people live their lives and never see or touch the ocean, but it touches all of us; no matter where we live. I've had that privilege. As a child growing up in New Jersey, we would as a family go to the Jersey Shore—that's where I first met the ocean. It was only when my family moved to Florida when I was 12 that it was right out in front of where we lived. For some, their playground is in a city or somewhere inland, but my playground was the ocean, and I found absolute fascination with life in the sea that does not occur on land.

What role does it play in our existence?

To answer that question, we should ask ourselves: Do we like to breathe? The majority of the oxygen in the atmosphere, as well as in the ocean, comes from creatures in the sea that, through photosynthesis, generate oxygen, capture carbon, provide food and keep this living planet as an operating, functioning system. The ocean also drives climate—hot and cold currents shape the temperature of the planet. Even those who have never seen the ocean in their lifetime are dependent on it for their existence.

Can you share some of your most astonishing discoveries from the deep ocean?

When Howard Carter opened King Tutankhamun's tomb in a Pyramid in Egypt [he was the first to do so], the first thing he said when asked if he could see

Above:
Her Deepness,
oceanographer and marine conservationist,
Dr Sylvia Earle.

anything, was, “it’s full of wonderful things”. That wondrous dazzlement is my reaction to what’s in the ocean. The life beneath is far beyond the diversity that you see even in the most wonderful rainforests. In the 1970s, thanks to a technology that enabled a habitable space underwater, I had the privilege of spending quite a lot of time in the average depth of the ocean, at 4,000m, where the Titanic rests—the maximum depth is 10,994m—and experience the extraordinary life there. These are the result of millions of years of the Earth’s existence—long before humans existed—and are also, in their own way, innocent of the damage we are doing to our waters.

Many people do not realise that most of life on Earth lives below where sunlight shines. As you descend down from 200m, it is dark; right at the edge of light and known as the Twilight Zone. There’s this layer of life here that migrates toward the surface at night and then sinks back by day. Little squids, octopuses, transparent creatures, baby fish, larvae, and the young stages of just about every marine creature, including sponges, starfish, and many that ultimately settle down in coral reefs. Their babies are planktonic, so they drift with the currents up to where they can feed on the result of photosynthesis, and then they sink back. The greatest time of abundance is at night, because they come up near the surface and get their groceries. This day-night cycle is a rhythm throughout the ocean and is filled with an immense diversity of life.

What are the most pressing challenges facing our oceans today?

Only about three per cent of the ocean has protection, and even on the land, only about 15 per cent of our life support system is treated with dignity and respect. It’s only in recent times that it’s been possible to see the ocean as one entity that truly connects everyone. With the help of technology, we have been able to gather information, crunch the numbers, get insight from high in the sky and deep in the sea, and see for the first time how the ocean really makes our existence possible. And what comes into clear focus is that the ocean is not just a physical phenomenon, but a living system. Most of life on Earth is down there.

Being in the deep sea is like being home for the 89-year-old.

Today, we live in a world that is not changing in our favour—synthetic materials like plastics that we humans have created without knowing the consequences are now throughout land, air and water, and they come back to haunt us. An ocean that is in trouble means a planet in trouble. We have to come together with respect, empathy and an understanding that we need to give back to these natural systems.

One of the reasons I’m so pleased to answer these questions is so the audience that you reach can be inspired to ask questions about the deep sea that they were really not asking until fairly recently.

How can emerging technologies be better utilised to monitor and protect marine biodiversity?

That view of Earth from space didn’t exist when I was a child, but now everyone has access to this view of Earth as a blue place within a universe that is really not very hospitable or habitable for us. Most of the ocean is still beyond our reach, although new technologies are coming along getting us access to the deep sea. If you don’t know, you cannot care. For years now I have been committed to a project called Deep Hope that develops submersibles that will gather the data from the deep and also give people access to the waters below. These little submarines will take scientists and the general public down into the depths of the ocean, into that Twilight Zone to explore. Part of the Honu Project, Deep Hope will be launched about this time next year in association with The Brando in French Polynesia, which is a part of non-profit research institution Tetiaroa

Society. As people, including children, experience the ocean themselves, they get to know fish, not just as something on their plate or in the market, but rather as incredible animals worth protecting.

The High Seas Treaty is one of the topics of focus for the Blue Eco Summit. Why is it important?

The High Seas Treaty aims to establish Marine Protected Areas in the high seas, empowering nations to work together to protect at least 30 per cent of the ocean and 30 per cent of the land by 2030. It is a great goal that will secure the future of our children and the planet. We're past the point of making our fortunes by mining the deep sea or thinking we have to capture and market wildlife on a scale we have in the past, as it has taken us to a precarious place. We have created a massive defaunation. The populations of those we have taken, from whales and sharks to tunas, krill and shrimps are down to half. We should instead be looking at the deep sea as a library of information filled with opportunities that can positively transform our lives. Now, there are many ways for us to see the double bottom line—you can make money and make a difference. They are not mutually exclusive.

What is the lasting message you'd like people to take away from your presence at Blue Water EduFest?

The 21st century human has the best chance to ensure enduring prosperity for all. We are so lucky to be at this point where we have choices—50 years from now we would have lost those options. We still have the coral reefs. Half of them have disappeared since I was a child, so have mangroves and seagrass meadows. The good news is that some people have started restoring them. That's why I'm pleased to come to Singapore and be part of the Blue Eco Summit; to celebrate the ocean and the individuals who are making a difference.

Deep-sea diving can be very physically demanding. How do you stay fit?

I keep an active life. Having access to the sea, swimming and diving, I believe, is not just good for the body, but for the soul too. People ask me, "are you still diving?", and I say: "Well, I'm still breathing, so of course, I'm still diving". You can do it for as long as you live. This may not be true of every form of human activity. I would hesitate to start skiing at this point in my life, because there's tremendous risk involved. But [diving is safe] if you listen and understand the do's and don'ts of what it takes to explore the ocean. It is the safest thing that I do. Being in the middle of traffic, getting on the highways, these are the most dangerous things I do, and I do a lot of that. Getting underwater is like being home.

What is your advice to people?

Nature is the best teacher. Whether in your backyard or in the middle of the city, go look at a tree, pick up anything, even a rock has a story. I really long for people to observe with child-like wonder and ask: Where did you come from? What's your history? There are mysteries all around and we just take so much for granted. Share and embrace nature, not with fear, but with love and respect and empathy. Everyone can do a piece of what it takes to shift this trajectory of decline to recovery. 🌊

PLASTIC REVOLUTION

PLASTIC ODYSSEY'S WORLD EXPEDITION IS FUELLED BY ITS CO-FOUNDERS' COMMITMENT TO COMBATING PLASTIC POLLUTION AND FOSTERING A HEALTHIER MARINE ECOSYSTEM.

TEXT SANDHYA MAHADEVAN PHOTOGRAPHY BENNY LOH

It's a very rainy September day—the heavy downpour casts the marina waters in a diffused light. But the cobalt blue hull of research vessel Plastic Odyssey stands out, as does the bold statement on its top deck “Clean up the past. Build the future.” The ship was in Singapore as a stopover on its around-the-world expedition visiting coastal areas most affected by plastic pollution. Armed with 10 plastic valorisation machines on board, including a washing tank, a crusher, a compactor, an extruder, a press, and a plate oven, the 130ft vessel demonstrates how plastic waste can be repurposed.

The ship set sail from Marseille, France, in October 2022 with the aim to cover 30 countries in three years, especially the coastal regions in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

“We reach coastal cities where there is a leakage of plastic into the environment and the sea, and help develop local solutions—we develop local micro-factories that can transform waste into an end product,” explains Alexandre Dechelotte (Alex), Co-founder and Managing Director of Plastic Odyssey, the non-governmental organisation (NGO) that owns the ship.

As we chat, Plastic Odyssey is getting ready to sail out of Singapore towards Cambodia, Vietnam, the Philippines and other countries in Southeast Asia. She carries 18 to 20 people at any given time: a crew of eight and a team that plays a crucial role in amplifying the project's impact during stopovers. This time, it includes two volunteers from Singapore and Indonesia.

Simon Bernard, the other Co-founder and CEO, lives on the ship, while Alex, being a father of two—a daughter, 8, and a son, 5—takes care of the operations on land, hopping on board in between.

FUELLING A PASSION

“Since young, I have always needed to be around the sea,” muses Alex, recalling summers spent fishing and diving with his family on a small island in Brittany, France. Sailing was an obvious vocation, so as a young teenager, he joined The National Maritime College of France in Marseille, and trained to be a Merchant Navy officer.

He met Simon, who was driven by the same passion for the ocean, at the school. “For all the six years of training, we were in the same classrooms, working on projects together related to nature and sports—anything other than class programme work,” he laughs.

It was in their last year that the seed for Plastic Odyssey was sown. Simon had just returned from an expedition to Senegal and was deeply disturbed by the plastic pollution there. He wanted to find a way for coastal areas with limited plastic waste management to have access to low-tech recycling solutions.

Having already worked together on a recycling project, Alex didn’t need much convincing and got on board immediately.

Plastic Odyssey started as a very small NGO in France before being incorporated into a company in 2019 so that they could buy a boat to do the work they had set out to do.

MAKING WAVES

Barely 22 years old at that time, the duo had youth, and a lot of enthusiasm and creativity on their side, but had to work hard to convince people of their potential to bring about long-term impact.

Their first boat was symbolically named Ulysse—it was a 6m-long vessel with an inbuilt pyrolyser for converting plastic into fuel through a process of thermal decomposition. As it was too small a boat to embark on a journey around the world, they started off with an expedition around France, finishing dramatically on the busy streets of Paris. At the top of the Galeries Lafayette, to be exact, pitches in Alex. “We stopped traffic and hauled the boat 35 metres above the ground to the top of the store using a crane. It was a crazy stunt, but it made people start taking us seriously.”

With a bit more funding on hand, the hunt for a larger research vessel culminated in the Plastic Odyssey in 2019, an old research vessel that was in working condition.

Unfortunately, they discovered asbestos all over the vessel—despite it being sold to them with an asbestos-free certification—and a weakness in the hull. The pandemic put another dent in their plans, but the duo persevered and the ship was fully ready—completely redone—to set out for its expedition in late 2022.

The ship has sailed to over 20 countries since, and to some very remote islands including Henderson Island, which is part of the Pitcairn Island Group in the Pacific Ocean.

Although extremely remote, uninhabited and surrounded by beautiful crystal-clear turquoise waters, it is marked as the most polluted in the world due to floating plastic. The Plastic Odyssey crew stayed on the island for 10 days and cleared 10 tonnes of plastic from its beaches—they had to use parasails to airlift the trash off the island as it is protected by a coral reef. The waste was recycled into furniture for a small island community nearby.

The duo have seen many such devastations in the course of their expedition, which is why reducing plastic pollution for the future has been crucial to their work. They do that by raising awareness wherever they sail to and also holding workshops on board the ship for children, youth, corporates and government organisations.

REWARDING WORK

There have been challenges aplenty in the past eight years of their conservation journey, including bureaucratic hurdles refusing them entry into certain ports and preventing them from conducting educational workshops on board. But wherever they have been able to reach, the favorable response and the visible impact created has made it worth the struggles.

By teaming up with local entrepreneurs and conservationists, the team has been able to train multiple coastal communities around the world to convert low-value plastic into useful products. From pavement tiles and plastic lumber that can be used as pontoons or for other construction purposes to lifestyle products such as chairs and tables, these products serve as a source of income and means of employment for these communities.

Then there are those rewards that are visible yet not quantifiable, says Alex of the awareness they have been able to create, especially among young children.

They have indeed come a long way and made a name for themselves on the world stage. “We started small, but we have convinced people around us that we were people to be reckoned with,” says Alex. “Eight years ago, Simon was a nobody, but today he is famous in not just the conservation world but also within the scientific community,” he adds with evident pride.

The expedition may run longer than three years, they both agree, as there is much to be done towards cleaning the past and building the future.

ONE°15 MARINA PANWA PHUKET IS SET TO TRANSFORM PHUKET'S BOATING SCENE.

TEXT SANDHYA MAHADEVAN

LONGITUDE NOVEMBER-DECEMBER 2024

The island of Phuket has been touted as paradise on Earth—with turquoise waters, golden sands, and with social, cultural and culinary experiences beyond par. Beautiful, serene and vibrant all at once, it has inspired many lyrical musings by intrepid travellers, beach buffs and sailors alike.

Situated on the west coast of mainland Thailand in the Andaman Sea, Phuket is the country's largest island and a gateway to some of Southeast Asia's most scenic and unspoilt island destinations, including Phi Phi Islands, Similan Islands, and Phang Nga Bay—boasting crystal-clear waters, stunning limestone cliffs, and abundant marine life.

Idyllic locale aside, Phuket’s warm tropical waters and predictable wind patterns make it a hotspot for boaters—motorboats, sailboats and yachts—from Singapore as well as from Europe, keen on exploring Asian waters.

EXPANDING HORIZONS

The ONE°15 Marina brand under integrated marina developer, operator and consultant SUTL Enterprise, takes the nautical experience up another notch with its newest marina project, developed in collaboration with the Numchai Group. With the first phase due to open at the end of the year, ONE°15 Marina Panwa Phuket is set to welcome the boating community from neighbouring

ONE°15 Marina Panwa Phuket is strategically situated at the southernmost tip of the island, which stands as the nearest departure point to the captivating and highly coveted Phi Phi Islands.

The new marina offers berthing for yachts up to 160ft in length, making it an essential stopover from visiting yachts from Europe—whether they are looking to spend some time exploring the island’s serene surroundings or taking a break before heading further Southeast.

As well as being a favoured destination for luxury yachts and recreational sailors, ONE°15 Marina Panwa Phuket acts as a hub for renowned charter operators catering to island hoppers eager to immerse themselves fully into the destination’s appeal. Both visitors and Members can look forward to unparalleled yacht charter experiences, featuring on-water entertainment with live DJs and delectable local cuisine in the next development phase.

INIMITABLE STANDARDS

The marina comes backed by the award-winning quality and service standards established by the ONE°15 Marina brand in all its marinas throughout the world. Adding to the adventure and exploratory options are lifestyle offerings and recreational Club facilities, scheduled for the second phase of development—due to complete by early 2026. Lifestyle amenities including restaurants and lounge spaces aside, there will be 24-hour security and CCTV surveillance, and gated marina access.

“ONE°15 Marina Panwa Phuket is committed to delivering the best-in-class marina standards and experiences that our esteemed ONE°15 Members and boaters worldwide can expect,” states Arthur Tay, CEO and Executive Director of SUTL Enterprise, in an expression of joy and pride at this significant milestone in the expansion of the ONE°15 network. PARTNERS AT SEA

FOR YACHT CAPTAIN HAIZI AZIZ, NYMPHAEA IS THE EMBODIMENT OF ALL THAT HE LOVES ABOUT BEING AT SEA.

TEXT SANDHYA MAHADEVAN PHOTOGRAPHY BENNY LOH

She has starred alongside Jessica Alba and Paul Foster in the American diving action-thriller Into the Blue. “At that time, she was white, but then she got painted blue,” says Captain Haizi Aziz of 33m yacht Nymphaea. Now a vibrant navy, she stands majestically in front of the Clubhouse.

Nymphaea continues to be in the limelight having been a part of experiential events such as educational workshops and coral conservation events organised by the Club and other organisations. She has been berthed at the marina since 2010—the owner is a long-time Member of ONE°15 Marina Sentosa Cove—and Captain Haizi has been a part of her journey since then.

THE SEA, MY HOME

Hailing from Johor Bahru, Malaysia, Captain Haizi started his career at sea with the navy, following his father’s career path albeit in the engineering side of things. Post his retirement, he joined the shipping industry, starting with Simpson Marine Singapore in 2000.

“I have always been fascinated by boats,” says Captain Haizi with a glint in his eye. Tinkering with boats throughout his career held him in good stead as he got the opportunity to supervise the building of a new yacht in Villaggio, Italy. And in 2010, opportunity came knocking once again through a message from the owner of Nymphaea to captain the yacht.

“I had always been in engineering, spending most of my time in the engine room. So when he asked me to command the board, it was daunting,” he recalls. But Captain Haizi took it in his stride and rose up to the challenge by undergoing training and getting all his certifications in order.

Today, he cannot imagine himself anywhere other than the control room of the yacht. This is evident during our shoot, as he shows us around the boat, including areas that appeared in the film. There is a sense of pride and a reverential affection almost as he sits in the wheelhouse area. “It’s my favourite place aboard the yacht, of course,” he laughs. “This is the one place that is my own.”

HOME AWAY FROM HOME

Being a captain of a motor yacht is a dream come true and gives him the unique opportunity to interact with the kind of people he would never have met had he stayed on in the engine room. Much as he likes the mechanical side of things, his focus is now entirely on maintaining the boat in ship-shape condition and making sure the needs of its owner are catered to—a task that he appears to have mastered so far.

His permanent crew of two—with one of them having been with the yacht since 2011—are equally attuned to their chores and duties on board. Convivial and easygoing as Captain Haizi appears, one would imagine that his naval training has imparted relevant leadership qualities that come in handy when commanding a crew.

On days when they are not out at sea—the yacht makes periodic recreational trips to Batam and Phuket—“I like to just spend my time on the boat, watching movies or serials on TV”, he says. Looking around at the yacht, it is plain to see why. The Broward Marine-built yacht has all the fittings for a luxurious life at sea. Elegant artworks are scattered strategically around the tastefully designed interiors. Two paintings of waterlilies especially allude to the Latin meaning of the yacht’s name and render a serene opulence to its impeccably maintained surroundings.

Captain Haizi still gets to exercise his engineering skills on board Nymphaea—along with his diving skills. “I am a navy-certified diver, but that does not transfer to civilian life, so the most amount of diving I do is go underwater to the bottom of the ship whenever we are doing repairs or checking on its condition,” he laughs.

He goes over to Malaysia once a month to visit his family—he has two daughters and a son, and five grandchildren. His son also responded to the call of the sea and works on Eagle Wings, which is berthed next to Nymphaea.

A man of a few words and needs, Captain Haizi is exactly where he wants to be. In an expression of sincere gratitude and contentment, he says: “Five years from now, I hope I will be captaining a bigger yacht—under the same owner.”

CINEMATIC FEASTS

CHRISTMAS DISHES FROM ICONIC MOVIES THAT CELEBRATE THE SPIRIT OF THE SEASON.

TEXT SANDHYA MAHADEVAN

It's that time of the year, the Christmas lights go up, the tree gets decorated and festive music follows you wherever you go—from the mall to the grocery store. Then come the holiday movies that you have probably seen more times than you can keep count, yet they seem completely apt for the time.

There's nothing like gathering around with the family and reminiscing about the favourite parts of these often-watched movies and rediscovering nuances. Food is the highlight in all of them—the tangible connection between food and family gatherings blurs the lines between reality and the screen. Some movies ever so subtly hint at the spirit of the season, while others, in-your-face Christmas feasts, lay it out for all to see. Here are some iconic dishes from such movies, along with tips and tricks on how you can make them your own.

ROAST BEAST

How the Grinch Stole Christmas

Endearing and exasperating all at once, this tale by Dr Seuss goes deep into the essence of Christmas and the oft-misinterpreted significance of its traditions. But there's no mistaking the place a Christmas feast holds. Angered by the insulting behaviour of some of the Whos (as the townspeople are called), the Grinch steals the gifts and decorations set aside for the town's giant Christmas tree. All's well that ends well, and he redeems himself by returning them and the Whos do the same by granting him the honour of carving the Roast Beast.

Decorated with pineapple rings with a cherry at the centre of each, the dish which is a cross between a bird and a hoofed animal, and boneless to top it all, is a figment of the author's imagination, but undoubtedly inspired by the traditional Christmas roast.

The most common version of the dish is the roast turkey, popular in the US and UK. Native to North America, English settlers are set to have adapted to turkey from the previous iteration of goose, which was popular in the UK. Being a larger bird, the turkey was found to be fulfilling in more ways than one. Ham or pork are also popular at the Christmas centre table in other parts of Europe especially Spain and Italy, while some other countries celebrate with a roast duck.

TOP TIP

Give yours an Asian twist with a glaze mix of soy sauce, honey, ginger, garlic, and sesame oil. Or, treat yourself to the Roast Turkey and Honey Glazed Ham from the Club's Taste of Christmas take-home goodies. Refer to page 34 for more details.

HOT COCOA

The Santa Clause

“Shaken, not stirred.” Judy the Elf’s line in The Santa Clause is à la James Bond, but she is not referring to a martini but rather a cup of hot chocolate.

It took Judy 1,200 years to finally perfect the drink. Her recipe: Not too hot, and with extra chocolate and sprinklings of candy cane dust or a snowflake garnish for an added festive touch.

Although not something we can relate to in sunny Singapore, a hot cocoa drink on Christmas is just what the soul needs in chilly December weather. The origins of the drink are said to be Mayan (1500 BCE). Although they didn’t quite consume it the way it is done today, they were the first to make a chocolate drink. Their version was a spicy and even bitter concoction made of cacao beans, water and chilli peppers, as well as other spices. The soul-satisfying drink was revered for its energy-boosting properties.

TOP TIP

For a Christmas twist between the Mayan version and Judy’s, mix unsweetened cocoa powder with hot whole milk, sugar, and pinches of cinnamon and cayenne pepper. Pour into a tall glass, and top with whipped cream and mini marshmallows.

BACCALÀ

Green Book

Not a holiday movie per se, but the grand finale of the movie rings in all that Christmas is about. Italian-American Tony Lip played by Viggo Mortenson invites Dr Donald Shirley, the world-renowned African-American pianist that he has been driving around the country for performances. Set in 1970s America, the film takes us through the racial prejudice and subjugation that Dr Shirley, played by Mahershala Ali, confronts and how it often overpowers his immense talent. A love-filled holiday dinner with the Lips brings it all to a fascinating close. The feast highlights Italian Christmas Eve food traditions called the Feast of the Seven Fishes featuring a variety of fish and seafood dishes such as Baccalà (salted cod), calamari (squid), shrimps and clams, and anchovies. These are showcased in a variety of dishes from antipasti to fritters.

Baccalà reflects the practice of preserving fish for long periods during pre-refrigeration times. Made from salted cod that has been dried and preserved, it is eaten in stew with tomatoes and olives, or fried as fritters.

TOP TIP

Marinating the cod with a cocktail of herbs and lemon juice gives it a pronounced zesty flavour. Or, shred them, mix with mashed potatoes, capers and garlic, and fashion them into crispy, golden croquettes.

MACARONI AND CHEESE

Home Alone

It's not a dish that comes to mind when planning a Christmas feast, but for young Kevin McCallister (played by Macaulay Culkin) left Home Alone—albeit accidentally—on Christmas, it's a comforting and gourmet meal. The young Kevin captured all our hearts as he learns to be a grown-up, protects his home from being burgled, and even comes to realise how much his indifference hurts his parents' feelings. Topping it all off is the scene where he settles for a Christmas dinner of his own—his table with holiday trimmings and sophisticated settings a direct contrast to his meal: A humble Mac and Cheese (macaroni with cheese).

Although now synonymous with America, the dish actually originated in medieval Italy, as a dish using maccheroni—pasta made from durum wheat. The dish made its appearance in Italian cookbooks as early as the 13th century. Considered a humble dish today, it was at that time one that only the wealthy could afford due to the high cost of cheese.

Ironically, it became a household staple in America during the Great Depression in 1937, when Kraft Foods introduced the boxed version of the dish with processed cheese powder—which was not just affordable but also easy to make with the simple addition of milk and butter. The staple does make it to the Christmas table as a side especially for the young ones.

TOP TIP

For an elevated version of the classic Mac and Cheese, swap the cheddar with gruyère cheese, add crispy pancetta, and grate in some nutmeg for holiday flair. Top it with caramelised onions and serve.

BANOFFEE PIE

Love Actually

In a film that resonates with all things Christmas—joy, love, friendship and acceptance. There are romantic scenes aplenty and then there's the one about unrequited love, where Mark, played by Andrew Lincoln, reveals his obsession for Juliet (Keira Knightley) by showing her a series of posters. In a scene a little before that, Juliet visits Mark to check her wedding footage. She carries with her a banoffee pie as a friendly gesture—nevertheless a very awkward moment for the secretly pining Mark. However, what this endearing scene did was catapult a beloved British dessert to iconic status, almost.

Banoffee pie—made from bananas, cream and a caramel or toffee filling, over a crunchy biscuit crust, is almost a staple in every British home today. It is said to have originated in 1971 at an East Sussex restaurant called The Hungry Monk. The restaurant's owner Nigel Mackenzie and his chef Ian Dowding were in fact trying to recreate Blum's Coffee Toffee Pie, an American dessert, but their experimentations led to a more intensely flavoured banoffee pie, which adds an indulgent dessert to any Christmas party. 🍷

TOP TIP

A traditional banoffee pie uses either buttery biscuit or graham crackers for its crust. Swap those with spiced ginger cookies for that additional festive flavour.

Durian Masterclass

On 19 July, the alfresco space of LATITUDE Bistro became the venue for an immersive masterclass befitting a king—specifically the king of fruits. Twenty-nine Members gathered to get up close and personal with a variety of durians. From a hands-on experience on identifying the various breeds of the fruit, to learning the right way to cut the thorny fruit, to games and a quiz, the session made sure Members not just gained new knowledge but also retained them. The evening ended with a sumptuous tasting of premium durians, including the delightful Black Gold Mao Shan Wang. Needless to say, Members enjoyed themselves thoroughly and looked forward to more such engaging events.

Tropical Summer Luau Party

On 20 July, Boaters' Bar transformed into a tropical paradise. Members were ushered into a space decorated with a colourful giant archway and leis. If they were not convinced they were in a Hawaiian dream, a beautifully decorated tropical fruit tree station, a tiki bar and a Hawaiian-themed buffet made sure of it. As Members savoured an endless supply of Piña Colodas and Blue Hawaii, among others, a Hawaiian dance performance and live music added to the party vibe. It was an evening of delightful conversations, sumptuous food and drinks, and soul-warming music and dance. Members exclaimed about the great music and dancing, highlighted that the serene marina views elevated the vibe and complimented the excellent customer service, and all expressed in unison that it was a fun-filled evening and hoped that the Club would continue to organise many more like this.

Tennis Friendly Rally

Tennis enthusiasts gathered at the Club's tennis courts on 29 and 30 July to share their common love for the game. Set against a backdrop of camaraderie and friendly competition, the event was more than just a social meet-up—it was a chance for participants to hone their tennis skills while forging new friendships. Members were seen refining their strokes, while building their confidence and tennis network—they revelled in the true spirit of sportsmanship.

Singapore Heritage Games

Captain's Table filled with an air of nostalgia on 9 and 10 August as Members of all ages gathered to reminisce about their favourite childhood games. Commemorating Singapore's National Day, traditional games such as Five Stones and Eraser Tag made it to the beloved list of many. Children, as young as three years, were unfamiliar with these games but eagerly joined—these games promote coordination and teach them to better control their motor movements. As their parents guided them along, the event transformed into an endearing family-bonding exercise. The laughter and enthusiastic shouts that reverberated at Captain's Table were proof enough.

Members' Social Night

Bar Nebula was the venue for an event where Members and guests got to familiarise themselves with the Club, renew their knowledge of its offerings and also mingle with fellow Members. The evening of 16 August began with Membership Director Yully Effendi warmly welcoming Members and providing them with updates on the Club's exciting upcoming events, and the various communication channels available within the Membership team. The Club's external partner HSBC was on hand to share information about their products and services, highlighting how these offerings could potentially benefit Members. Given that it was in the month of Singapore's National Day, the canapés took on a local inspiration, which paired well with the free-flow of alcoholic beverages. The event was a great platform for networking, and new Members also got to meet with key personnel from the Marina, Membership and Recreation departments, fostering open communication and engagement. Watching Members exchange contact information with each other was a sure sign that the event had served its objective.

5-day Tennis Camp

Olaso Tennis Academy was back in August with a five-day tennis camp for young enthusiasts of the game. The camp was helmed by Coach Samson, who helped the participants master their strokes and footwork, and hone their coverage of the court. Participants were given an opportunity to practise what they had learnt through friendly matches. Although initially intended to be a five-day camp, the duration had to be cut down to three—from 5 to 7 August—due to bad weather. Nevertheless, Members commented that they received the full benefit of the camp under the expert guidance of the coach. His pleasant demeanour and patient handling of the events across the three days made the entire experience very memorable, urging Members to hope for more such camps in the future.

Retro Boogie

On 31 August, Boaters' Bar came alive with some retro flair. Transporting Members to the 1970s was an American diner-themed buffet, free-flow of alcohol, and an energetic live band playing catchy tunes from the decade. Games such as Bingo! added to the nostalgia and also brought a lot of excitement around the room. Four Members were crowned winners. This, however, was not the only award that was given. Members embraced the theme wholeheartedly and arrived in retro outfits complete with accessories and hairdos representative of the time. These inspired prizes for Best Dressed and Big Hair, judged by a panel including Kanna Karmegan, the Club's Operations Director, and James Roy, the Marina's Senior Director. With incessant dancing and fun and fervour throughout the evening, it was overall a memorable evening for all.

45

Exclusive Premiere: Porsche Taycan

Sixty Members had the unique opportunity to experience the unveiling of the Porsche Taycan. Held on the evening of 5 September at Pasir Panjang Power Station, the event began with a detailed presentation, highlighting the luxury electric vehicle's revolutionary features, cutting-edge capabilities and sustainability ethos. Members were also in for a bigger treat as they got to sit inside the vehicle and experience Porsche's latest innovative offering. They also got to mingle with fellow automotive enthusiasts, industry experts and Porsche representatives over gourmet nibbles and alcoholic beverages. To cap the evening's glamour and excitement quotient was the presence of local and international celebrities. Watching the overall vibe, it was very evident that Members were thoroughly enjoying every moment of it. Some even expressed that they could not wait for more such unique and exclusive events.

Members' Sunset Sail

On 6 September, 25 Members embarked on a journey on board the Lagoon 44 to catch the sunset over Singapore's skyline. Although cloudy skies prevented them from seeing the golden transformation, the delightful breeze and the ambience on board made it overall an unforgettable experience for all. The evening was filled with laughter, meaningful conversations, and the forming of new friendships, with Members bonding over free-flowing Moscato and an assortment of other refreshing beverages. Special moments were also marked with the celebration of a birthday on board. Needless to say, it was a magical time.

Founded in 1989 by French yachtsman Philippe Jeantot, the Vendée Globe is an around-the-world race via the Great Capes, where a sailor sails solo in an 18m monohull without stopovers or assistance—all repairs need to be done at sea. The race takes 90 days to complete, and so far only 114 of the 200 who have competed in the Vendée Globe to date have managed to cross the finish line in Les Sables d'Olonne.
